TALLAHASSEE, Fla. – The Florida League of Cities, the united voice for Florida's municipal governments for more than 90 years, today announced the launch of a comprehensive coronavirus resource webpage to help Florida's municipalities as they work to protect residents. The webpage, flcities.com/coronavirus, includes links to cities' coronavirus pages; local emergency declarations; funding and technical assistance; and other local, state and federal resources. The page will be updated daily as more cities make announcements and as more information is shared from the Florida Division of Emergency Management, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization and other state and federal partners.

"Our member cities are constantly sharing strategies and working closely with each other, and this webpage is another resource to utilize in this global battle against the coronavirus," said FLC Executive Director Michael Sittig. "As the information on our webpage continues to grow, we hope cities can use it to see what other cities have done, stay updated with state and federal news and apply what they learn with the resources in their own communities. We are incredibly proud of the herculean efforts of the leadership and staff of Florida's 412 cities, towns and villages."

The League's Coronavirus Resources webpage includes more than 100 links to local, state and federal coronavirus-related resources. Some of the categories include:

- Local Coronavirus Webpages.
- Local Emergency Declarations and Orders.
- Local Ordinances and Policies.
- Local Government Resources.
- State and Federal Funding & Technical Assistance.
- State & Federal Resources.
- Recent News.
- Print Resources.

Access the webpage at flcities.com/coronavirus.

The League is also providing text messaging alerts to members and will be launching a bi-weekly webinar to help municipal leadership manage through this crisis.
